WE OFFER FOUR DIFFERENT GLASS ART DAY COURSES AT OUR STUDIO IN ROCHESTER, KENT.

STAINED GLASS several courses are available from introductory courses through to intensive one to one tuition. On the introductory course areas covered will include design, glass cutting, leading, soldering and finishing. Each student will leave the day having made a stained glass panel to take home. Intermediate and advanced courses are available for students with experience in lead work or that have attended the introductory course.

COPPER FOIL for students wanting to do more intricate and detailed work. This is the technique used to create glass work such as tiffany lamps. On the day course students will produce a sun catcher using detailed patterns. You will be shown how to cut glass, build the design using copper foil, solder the seams and patina and polish the finished projects before taking them home.

FUSING (KILN WORK) on the introductory one day course students will be guided through all the stages to produce a piece of fused work. Areas covered will include design, cutting, glass compatibility, preparation of the kiln through to the firing cycle. At the end of the day the student would have produced either a panel or bowl and have a good understanding of the techniques required to produce the finished item. More intensive courses are available for those wanting to learn more advanced techniques, please enquire.

FUSED JEWELLERY students will experiment with different effects to create their own collection of jewellery, including pendants, cufflinks and earrings. You will be given a selection of different glass including dichroic to design with. The main emphasis is fused work but you will be shown how to create glass beads using framework.

The necessary tools, materials and equipment will be supplied in all of the courses. The classes are kept small to enable us to give plenty of individual attention to each student, therefore there is a maximum of six students per class. Courses run throughout the year. Please check our website for dates and prices.
